BEAUTY WIT AND HEROISM COMBINED!
Published This Day and for sale at the Bookstores:
THE COURT OF NAPOLEON;
Or, SOCIETY UNDER THE FIRST EMPIRE.
WITH SIXTERS PORTAITS OF
ITS BEAUTIES, WITS AND HEROINES,
BY FRANK B. GOODRICH (Dick Tinto).
Royal Quarto. Turkey Antique, $12 3.
The plan of this work is to present in one view the passage of French society from the confusion into which it was thrown by the Revolution, to a regular and normal situation, under the dictatorship of Napoleon. The various periods treated of are flustrated by their remarkable women—the Regin of Terror by its herines—the Directory by its celebrated beauties—the Consular and Empire by the wites and belies of the Imperial Era.

neither believed in God and his angels, nor the devil and his limps."

(16.) M'lle Georges, the tragic actess and the protege of Napoleco. The Boston Daily Journal in a review of this Book says:

"The sportsoch of the holidays is presaged by the usual announcements of beautiful annuals and gift books. But in this department of book publishing, Mesers. Derby & Jackson lave taken the public completely by storm. They have led off with a work which in point of elegance it will be difficult to equal, and certainly which will not be surpassed. 'The Court of Napoleon' is one of the most prefect works of the kind which has ever been issued from the press in this country. The letter press, the illustrations, typographical execution and he binding are all in harmony. The finest works in point of mechanical excellence, published as annuals and gift books, are usually very inferibr in literary merit, but we have in this publication a work which, without its a sornment of rich binding, beautiful type and elegant engravings, would at once arrest public attention for its piquancy and interest.

"The author, who is a son of S. G. Goodrich, 'Peter Parley,' and is favorably known to the public as a writer over the signature of 'Dick Tinto,' remarks in his preface that 'although authorius volumes have been written upon Napoleon in this country, there is none whose purpose is to give a general view of his influence of society. His career has been regarded as exclusively military and political, and to these topics historians and carayists have principally directed their labors. Nor has there been, even in France, a methodical treatise, presenting a delineation of manners and morsis under the Empire, at the same time tracing their connection with the court, and noting the effect produced by the Empiror and his system upon the effect produced by the Empiror and his system upon the receivty he had created. It is the object, therefore, of this volume to fill an obvious void, sud thus to supply a practical test of the character and infl dispersed, and marriage censers to exposition, debauchery and violence, and only tolerable as an improvement on the Reign of Terror. The termination of this period, in 1729, introduces Bonaparte upon the stage, and the author then enters upon the main object of his book, to show the effect of the Revolution, of which he was the hero, upon society, morals and manners, to pote the infinence of Napoleon upon the literature, elemen and at of the time, to chronicle the processes by, which he sought to revive religion, to restore the sway of public opinion, to resuscitate the amenities of life, to redeem the country from excess an premature decay, and to lift from the heart of the nation its weight of lassitude and disgust.

"The first Court of Homaparte the Consul was a heterogeneous gathering typical of the chaotic state of society. Napoleon's serical officers had faithfully inflowed his injunctions to marry, and thely young and pretty wives, taken from all ranks of society. This period introduces to the reader Mesdams Junot, De Remussi, Duroc, and Ney. An intercetting chapter of this period is devoted to the courtely and marriage of Gon. Junot, and bapply illustrates the social manners of the period. The sace dung chapter gives an account of an evening at the celebrated Madame Reconder's, after order had been completely restored and society had recovered its tone, giving an excellent lides of the occupations and amassements of the better classes at this wind. It was during this epoch that the Legion of Honor wind, the should be had been completely restored and society has recovered its tone, giving an excellent lides of the occupations and amassements of the better classes at this wind the should be the should be considered. The social character of that period, with its rigid adopted. The social character of the Empire, simultaneous with the producation of which the boasehold of Napoleon was recognitioned. The colin character of the Empire, simultaneous with the producation of which the boasehold of Napoleon was r remarkable period. Chapters are devoted to each of these she peets, and the whole picture of the state of society is finished and vivid.

"The engravings in this work, in point of artistic execution, are not excelled by anything of the kind which has been published in this country. They embrace portraits of Josephine, Marie Le vice, Charlotte Corday, Madame R. dand, Medame Tailien, Madame Romot, Pauline Bornaparte, Madame de Stael, Caroline Bornaparte, Hortense De Boanharnais, Midle, Lemormand, Midle, Georges, They are reperbed, Madame Regnaule, and Midle, The captavage were secured in Fark, and to delicacy of coloring are unapproached. The whole work, in fact, is finished and be eithid in all stederals, and would grace the most richly furnished boudoir or library."

As our a limited number of copies can be furnished, those desting a supply will please send in their orders at once. They will be filled strictly in the order of time re-edved.

It will be a fund of instruction and pleasure for many a year." [N Y. Independent.

"Faper, typography, binding, are as comptuous as the most fastidious taste could desire. Pitty effect engravings, from the burin of an artist at the bead of als protession in Germany, and of the highest style and finish, illustrate the leading and most characteristic events in the life of the great Reformer. The publisher has conferred on our Frotestant and literary and art-leving public, a great favor, by offering it in ea worthy a style this noble monument to Luther's glosty.

From the Rev. S. H. Tyue, D. D.

"You have accemplished an unusually beautiful and valuable book, both in the exgravings and in the letter press."

From the Rev. J. W. Alexander, D. D.

"It is a publication so interesting useful and elegant—so breathing the very sprit of Protestantium, and so calling up before us the personality of the great, good and genial Reformer, that I field delight in thinking how many American for can weigh anything, it shall be recommended."

From the Rev. W. M. Adams, D. D.

"Such books supply a place not yet filled in our American literature. Most of the Gift Books which have hitherto been published, however embellished by the engraver's art, have contained very little in the text of real value. Your Late of Luther was prepared, at I see, by Archdeacon Hace. Tandy used fiermony to attempt the volume with high value. Then it is entitled wi
